Navigating the Book Publishing Process in the Social Sciences and Humanities: Advice for Junior Faculty

This panel will bring together editors from four prestigious university presses who will discuss “best publishing practices” for scholars who are early on in their careers. Topics will include choosing the most appropriate presses for your work, what to include (and what not to) in the book proposal, the proposal submission process, how to respond to peer reviews, the book contract, permissions, what to expect after submitting a completed manuscript, and strategies for helping the press to promote your book.

Featuring:

Deborah Gershenowitz, Senior Editor for Law, American History to 1900, and Military History at New York University Press

Erin Graham, Editor for Business and Economics at University of Pennsylvania Press

David McBride, Senior Editor for Current Affairs, Political Science, and Sociology at Oxford University Press

Robert Tempio, Senior Editor for Philosophy, the Ancient World, and Political Philosophy at Princeton University Press

Moderator: Brendan O’Malley, Ph. D. Candidate in History, CUNY Graduate Center; Writing Fellow, Brooklyn College; and former academic book editor
