The Wolfe Institute

The Ethyle R. Wolfe Institute for the Humanities, in cooperation with the Minorities and Philosophy Student Chapter at Brooklyn College, presents a Wolfe Fellowship

Loving Immigrants in America

Thursday, November 16, 2017
12:30 to 2 p.m.
State Lounge, Fifth floor
Brooklyn College Student Center
Campus Road and East 27th Street

For information: 718.951.5847 wolfeinstitute@brooklyn.cuny.edu Twitter: twitter.com/Wolfe_Institute

Daniel Campos will read a short section from his book, Loving Immigrants in America (Lexington Books, 2017), and Nimra Asif will present her critical response and questions. The goal is to facilitate a conversation with everyone present about diverse immigrant experiences and their ethical implications in our current social and political context. Loving Immigrants in America is a philosophical account of a Central American immigrant’s personal experience in the United States. Narrative and reflective at once, it is written from the standpoint of American philosophy enriched by fiction, poetry, song lyrics and memoirs from the Americas. It recommends an ethic of love – resilient love – for the interpersonal relations and day-to-day interactions between members of immigrant and receiving communities in the U.S. today.

Daniel Campos is from Costa Rica, and an associate professor of philosophy at Brooklyn College. He wrote this book with the help of a writing fellowship from the Wolfe Institute for the Humanities.

Nimra Asif is a student from Pakistan and majoring in philosophy at Brooklyn College.

Loving Immigrants in America
An Experiential Philosophy of Personal Interaction

Daniel G. Campos

Loving Immigrants in America