The Death and Life of Malcolm X

Dr. Christopher Douglas, an adjunct associate professor in the Africana Studies Department at Brooklyn College, is an interdisciplinarian with a background in sociology, philosophy and the history of ideas. He received his Ph.D. from Wayne State University in Detroit, and was a fellow at the Adlai Stevenson Institute of the University of Chicago. He has taught at Adelphi University, Molloy College and Medgar Evers College. His presentation discusses how Malcolm X's death has impacted white America in general and black America in particular.
