Slave Rebellions in the U.S., Africa, and the Caribbean

Professor Moses Davies is an adjunct assistant professor in the Department of Africana Studies. He attended Fourah Bay College in Sierra Leone and did graduate work at Brooklyn College and Columbia University in New York. A proud alumni of Brooklyn College, with an MA from the History Department, Professor Davies has taught at Brooklyn College for over ten years.

His deep passion for addressing poverty and assisting families afflicted by HIV/AIDS led to the founding of Rebuild A Nation, a not-for-profit organization based in New York, Maryland and Sierra Leone. He previously worked with the NYC Public Library in Queens, coordinating programs for disadvantaged youths, assisting them in making a transition to higher education and work. Professor Davies has also held leadership positions in many adult education and literacy programs, including programs run by the New York City Department of Education. Professor Davies is currently working on two books, one an analysis of I.T.A. Wallace Johnson (an early pan Africanist, trade unionist and journalist) and another entitled “The Beloved Journey: an Inspirational Guide for your Spiritual Health.”
