Minute on the Death of Professor Jonathan Baumbach
Jon Baumbach, a major figure in the English Department from 1966 until his retirement in 2000, died March 28, 2019. He was a co-founder of the department's extremely well-known MFA program in fiction, which he helped administer for nearly 30 years. The program continues to graduate many professional writers.
Prof. Baumbach was devoted to his craft; Early in his career, he published a critical study of contemporary American fiction, The Landscape of Nightmare. He wrote more than a dozen works of his own fiction, many of them highly innovative. In order to further the kind of experimental writing he was increasingly doing, Prof. Baumbach and his English department colleague Peter Spielberg founded the Fiction Collective, which published a number of his books.
Prof. Baumbach was a Brooklyn College graduate, class of 1955. He earned a master's degree in playwriting from Columbia and, in 1965, a doctorate from Stanford. Before coming to Brooklyn College, he taught at Ohio State and New York University. As a visiting faculty member, he taught at Tufts, Brown, Princeton and the University of Washington. In addition to fiction, Prof. Baumbach was devoted to the movies. He wrote many essays and reviews about them and twice chaired the National Society of Film Critics. He served as film critic for Partisan Review

Prof. Baumbach is survived by four children and three grandchildren.
