Varieties of Queer

(In)visibility

With

Professor Matthew Moore

Since the beginning of the gay rights movement, the phrase "coming out of the closet" has been commonly used to describe an important aspect of the LGBTQ experience. More recently, however, as the queer community has expanded and developed, new forms of visibility (and invisibility) and new ways of thinking about self-disclosure have emerged as well. This will be an open-ended discussion of the varieties, and the moral implications, of self-disclosure in the LGBTQ community.

The discussion will occur in 3308 Boylan Hall!

Refreshments will be served.
