Brooklyn College
Political Science Journal

2010 – 2011 Edition

The Brooklyn College Political Science Journal is an annual academic forum edited and written by Brooklyn College graduate students. Each year it focuses on a theme that is central to national and international politics.

The focus of the 2010 – 2011 edition is Protest and Change. As they shake societies and governments throughout the world, different and rapidly spreading forms of protest have become a focal point in the study of political change. How have different groups of citizens, from students to peasants, embraced protest? How much impact will it have on laws, policy, and democracy itself?

This is a chance to participate in this evolving debate and be published in an academic journal. You may submit analytical papers written for a class or a new paper on any aspect of this theme. Those papers should be approximately 2,000 words. You can also write about your personal experiences, report on a specific protest movement, or do a review of a book or event. Those papers can be from 1,000 to 2,000 words.

If you are interested in being an author in the journal, please submit by March 28 an electronic version of your paper, as an attached Word document, to Jessica Coyle at jcoyle918@gmail.com. One of the editors will then contact you by April 15 about inclusion in the journal.

If you have any questions, please contact Prof. Mark Ungar, the Journal's faculty advisor, at MUngar@brooklyn.cuny.edu
