Success in business depends on the ability to make the correct decisions at the correct time. One way to consistently increase your team’s chances of navigating uncertain markets and economies is to gain experience supported by a rigorous business education. The Koppelman School of Business will work with you to help you develop and hone the skills needed to add true value to businesses that are serving diverse and growing markets. Our dedicated professors of management, economics, finance, and accounting will use their teaching, research, and practical expertise to make your investment in an M.S. in business administration a very rewarding education experience.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION
The unique M.S. in Business Administration—Accounting focuses on the accounting dimensions of businesses. Decisions and unexpected events both good and bad will make themselves known in the accounts of a business. This well-balanced business degree will offer students important depth and scope into the management of business that are grounded in and guided by the practice of accounting. The information embedded in the accounting of a business is an important source of data that should drive better future decisions. If you want to understand what is driving value or inhibiting value creation, you must be able to account the sources and uses of scarce resources. With a deep knowledge of accounting, you will have an edge in the departments of accounts payable and accounts receivables in small, medium, and large enterprises, including in both commercial and consumer banking.
