Adjourned 6:10 p.m.
The Committee discussed the Cleared4 process and the challenges we continue to have with individuals not having accurate contact information in Cleared4. Since CUNY just created a QR code that can be used to access individual accounts, we discussed the document we are putting together to explain the process. We would disseminate in multiple ways to reach as broad an audience as possible.

We also discussed how we can improve the ways we can reach more students.
1. Tony Thomas joined the meeting to present findings from the Strategic Enrollment Management (SEM) working group exploring Brooklyn College’s reputation and morale on campus. The group focused especially on what is currently strong and where there are opportunities for improvement.

   - Bright spots include:
     - A universal, sincere dedication to our students and mission
     - Pride in the diversity on our campus
     - Long-serving faculty and staff creates a feeling of home among many
   - Focus for improvements include:
     - Many areas relate to insufficient resources — e.g., lack of support for faculty research, lack of office space for adjuncts, understaffed for workload, feeling of having to do more with less
     - Many faculty and staff want greater recognition for their service
     - Bureaucratic runaround affects morale

   The findings from this working group will be considered in the final Strategic Enrollment Plan that is current under development.

2. Mara McGinnis gave an update on the redesign of the College website. The redesign work by Ologie is continuing, and the new site is on target for launch this summer.
Prior to arriving on campus each day or attending an in-person class, students must receive a Cleared for Access pass or have a green check in their BC Navigator app. Students who test positive or are a close contact to someone who tested positive must notify the College through the COVID-19 Case Collection Form. If access to campus is restricted based on COVID-19 protocols, students must notify the instructor of their absence by email within 48 hours, if possible. Students are not required to provide the instructor with documentation of COVID-19 symptoms. Students will not be penalized for absences or late course assessments unless they are unable to complete course learning outcomes. Faculty will work with students to identify ways to complete course requirements which may include remote participation. Students should confirm that their access to campus is granted prior to coming to campus. Absences or lateness due to failing to follow proper procedures are not excused. However, faculty should have leniency when students are late due to system failures at the gate.

If COVID-19 related illness results in any missed course work (face-to-face or online), students should proactively work with the instructor to plan make-up work. It remains the student’s responsibility to complete any missed work such as assignments, tests, quizzes, labs, or projects outside of scheduled class time. But please realize that class will continue, and students may find themselves in the situation where they are unable to complete all work by the end of the semester. In such a case, students should consider a late withdrawal, medical release from classes, or an incomplete grade. If students have COVID-19 disability related risk factors that may affect attendance, students are strongly encouraged to register with the Center for Student Disability Services to receive necessary accommodations. If students believe the instructor has not made reasonable and appropriate accommodations for absences, or makeup assignments, projects, labs, or exams due to COVID-19, students have the right to submit a complaint to the department chair during the term as well as to appeal a final grade to the Faculty Council Committee on Course and Standing.

Faculty should make every effort to accommodate students who must miss class due to COVID-19 and ensure that they feel safe to report their status to the College. Keeping our community healthy relies on sick students staying home.
Petition for CUNY to cancel classes for Eid

Consistent with New York State Education Law § 224-a, the City University of New York has a policy regarding religious accommodations which state, “students who are absent from school because of a religious belief will be given the equivalent opportunity, without any additional fee charged, to register for classes or make up any examination, study or work requirements missed because of such absence on any particular day or days.” However, not all religious beliefs are treated equally. Currently, classes are not scheduled on some key religious holidays providing students who hold those beliefs the opportunity to observe the holiday while not missing any class time. However, for other religious beliefs, students who hold those beliefs are excused from class, but burdened with the task of making up missed work which could include examinations. Because classes aren’t canceled, some students must make a choice of observing the holiday or attend class. Given the high percentage of Muslim students at Brooklyn College and the City University of New York, the Brooklyn College Policy Council supports the USG Joint Proposition 018b: Accommodating Muslim Students for Eid and acknowledges the CUNY University Student Senate Resolution entitled, Accommodating Muslim Students for Eid-Al-Fitr, which also reflects the decision made by the New York City Department of Education in 2015.
