Dear Friends of Brooklyn College

At Brooklyn College in the last year, we have been busy building—not only the physical campus, but also the educational environment that best encourages vigorous learning and scholarship.

Our priorities result largely from initiatives we launched during the first five years of my presidency—and particularly within the last twelve months. These include expanding the campus, renewing the natural sciences, and broadening our fiscal base.

The physical transformation of the campus continues apace. We have doubled the size of the Morton and Angela Topfer Library Café, and it is open again 24/7. Over the summer, we renovated and modernized eleven lecture halls in Ingersoll Hall. We move ahead with the West Quad Project, laying out a new quadrangle and pouring the foundation for a new building.

We have begun a major rebuilding of our science facilities and our science curriculum. The project will proceed in two stages. First, Roosevelt Hall will be transformed into a science building; then we will renovate Ingersoll Hall. The science faculty meanwhile has been discussing and defining the shape science teaching and research should take at the College. You can read more about all these projects in the pages of this Annual Report.

Brooklyn College has been more enterprising than ever in broadening our fiscal base. Our foremost endeavor is to meet the challenge set by Leonard and Claire Tow, who have given us a $10-million matching grant to build a new performing arts center. We hope you will join our effort to fund the first privately financed building on campus.

This is an exciting time of creating new structures for the College and ever greater opportunities for students. The alumnae and alumni named in this report have contributed to this effort and helped make Brooklyn College the magnificent public institution that it is.

I look forward to working with you in the coming year.

Christoph M. Kimmich
President
Dear Alumni and Friends

I am especially pleased to address you as chairman of the Brooklyn College Foundation at such an exciting time in the history of Brooklyn College, a time that both honors our tradition and looks to a future full of promise.

The College celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary this year—an occasion especially meaningful for us in a period of rebirth and expansion. We also broke ground for two new buildings on campus and celebrated our most recent Rhodes Scholar, Eugene Shenderov. Our Rhodes Scholar and our new construction are both examples of how your gifts to the Foundation can make Brooklyn College even more effective in enabling our students to learn, gain inspiration, and embark on productive lives.

I thank President Christoph M. Kimmich for his leadership in all these endeavors. He has brought the College to new levels of purposefulness, prominence, and promise. We enjoy national recognition and attract a steady stream of ever more highly qualified students.

As you may know, it was my pleasure to establish the Magner Center for Career Development and Internships in 2003. At the Magner Center, students seek guidance about careers, explore internships in their chosen field, and plan for their futures; many win stipends available there to support their education. Again and again students have told me that the help they receive at the Magner Center has been invaluable to them as they move from the College out into the world. I find my direct involvement with students and their career development infinitely rewarding. I urge you, too, to identify an area in the College’s endeavor that interests you, to support it, and to enjoy the rewards.

However you choose to support Brooklyn College, you can make a great difference in the lives of our students. Your gift ensures that the College will continue to enrich its academic programs, provide effective student services, support students with scholarships and stipends, and attract and retain an outstanding faculty.

On behalf of the Foundation, I thank you for your support, past, present, and future.

Marjorie M. Magner, ’69
Chairman
Brooklyn College Foundation
An Architecture of Brooklyn College continues a long tradition of distinguished campus architecture that creates an environment conducive to learning and scholarship.
The College has had a banner year. We celebrated our seventy-fifth anniversary, launched a major construction and renovation project that will transform the campus, distinguished ourselves with another Rhodes Scholar, won high marks from the Princeton Review for quality and affordability, and made plans to ensure that we will continue to perform at this high level.

A huge crowd—students, faculty, staff, trustees, and guests—gathered on the Quad on May 10, 2005, for our seventy-fifth birthday party. Actors portraying President Franklin D. Roosevelt, his wife, Eleanor, and Mayor Fiorello La Guardia arrived in a classic car to lay the cornerstone of the campus once again. Mack the Knife and Pirate Jenny performed numbers from a gala production of The Threepenny Opera. The Theater Department designed a giant birthday cake, a children’s choir sang and a school orchestra played, and everyone signed a huge birthday card.

The celebration continues throughout the year. The “Brooklyn on My Mind” reading series, hosted by Leonard Lopate of WNYC Radio, will feature such leading Brooklyn writers as Jonathan Lethem, Pete Hamill, Susan Choi, and Colson Whitehead. The Department of Theater will present a number of notable works, such as Nobel Prize–winning poet Seamus Heaney’s adaptation of Antigone and works by Donald Margulies (Sight Unseen), Marivaux (The Game of Love and Chance), and Arthur Miller (the McCarthy-era parable The Crucible). The Conservatory of Music will offer nearly fifty concerts this year, and in December the Brooklyn College Opera Theater will mount a full-scale production of Mozart’s Le Nozze di Figaro. The Art Department will finish the year with an important retrospective exhibit of the works of the most esteemed graduates since the inception of its M.F.A. program.
Brooklyn College is famous for its beautiful campus. The College is also notable for its state-of-the-art technology. These contribute to a learning environment in which students can change their lives.

In the most important capital expansion since the Midwood campus was constructed during the Great Depression, the College continues its tradition of distinguished architecture and first-rate facilities in five major projects: the new West Quad Building; the new Center for the Performing Arts; expansion of the Morton and Angela Topfer Library Café; conversion of Roosevelt Hall into a center for science and research and modernization of the Ingersoll lecture halls; and creation of a conference center in the Student Center.
Brooklyn College’s Rhodes Scholars

Eugene Shenderov, ’05

Born in Ukraine, Eugene was two years old when the Chernobyl nuclear reactor, 140 miles from his home, melted down. Eugene developed leukemia, and the Shenderovs immigrated to Brooklyn to seek treatment when Eugene was six. After years of home schooling, Eugene entered Edward R. Murrow High School, where he graduated near the top of his class. He entered Brooklyn College on a Presidential Scholarship and enrolled in the B.A.–M.D. program. A chemistry major, he won a Furman Travel Stipend in summer 2004, which he used to pursue cancer research at Oxford University. In fall 2004, Eugene was named a Rhodes Scholar and the following spring, a National Institutes of Health fellow. He has now returned to Oxford University to work with Dr. Enzo Cerundolo, a world-renowned cancer researcher, at the Weatherall Institute of Molecular Medicine.

Lisette Nieves, ’91

Lisette Nieves was a 1992 Rhodes Scholar and is a graduate also of the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs of Princeton University. She was director for special projects at the After-School Corporation, where she designed forums for superintendents and principals and pilot programs for mentoring in local high schools. She also served as director of grants management at the Upper Manhattan Empowerment Zone and as chief of staff for the New York City Department of Youth and Community Development. Currently, Lisette is a consultant to nonprofit organizations in strategic planning, program development, and management, and a graduate instructor in public administration at Brooklyn College.
This past year, President Christoph M. Kimmich launched the most ambitious part of a plan to restore the campus to the original 1935 design by its founding architect, Randolph Evans. A second quadrangle will be created west of Bedford Avenue, anchored by a strikingly beautiful West Quad Building.

As a first step to implementing this plan, Plaza Building has been demolished. Throughout the spring and summer, workers painstakingly separated Plaza from adjacent James and Roosevelt Halls, and at the end of the summer it was reduced to rubble. For the master plan of which this project is a part, the Society of College and University Planners awarded Brooklyn College the Excellence in Planning and Architecture Merit Award in Campus Heritage at its annual meeting in July 2005.
West Quad Building

The stunning new West Quad Building will consolidate under one roof currently scattered student services—registrar, bursar, academic advisement, scholarships, financial aid, and the Magner Center for Career Development and Internships. The West Quad Building will also house the Department of Physical Education and Exercise Science and first-rate athletic facilities: a swimming pool and high-diving board, competition and practice gymnasiaums, a dance studio, racquetball courts, a fitness center, and teaching and research labs. A centrally positioned glass-enclosed stairwell and elevator tower will be illuminated at night like a beacon across the campus.

The project’s architect, Rafael Viñoly, has a history of designing college buildings. His renovation of John Jay College of Criminal Justice won the esteemed Bard Award and the Municipal Art Society Award.

Center for the Performing Arts

The Center for the Performing Arts will be an architecturally striking building housing rehearsal and performance space, set design and construction workshops, a double-height theater, a grand lobby and arcade for exhibitions, and classroom, meeting, and reception space. This consortium of the performing arts will attract theorists and practicing artists, talented students, and distinguished faculty.

Leonard, ’50, and Claire, ’52, Tow have pledged an unprecedented gift of $10 million to Brooklyn College for the new campus facility, the first on campus to be built from private funds. The balance of the construction costs, approximately $15 million, will come from the matching gifts of generous friends and alumni.

The Library Café

The Morton and Angela Topfer Library Café at Brooklyn College was the only Internet café in the City University of New York when it opened in 2000. Equipped with fifty networked computer stations and open twenty-four hours, seven days a week, the café is immensely popular and serves as many as eight hundred students a day. Natural light enters the café through large windows overlooking a planted courtyard. The interior space is made inviting by wood finishes and comfortable ergonomic seating.

The Library Café has been such a resounding success that it has just been expanded to twice its original size and furnished with thirty additional workstations and eighteen wireless ports. There are new study areas as well.
Ingersoll Hall and Roosevelt Hall

Alumni visiting Ingersoll Hall often remark that “the place hasn’t changed much.” Indeed, movie crews looking for a “circa 1930s classroom” found a perfect set in Ingersoll’s old lecture halls, with their fixed wooden seats, quaint laboratory tables equipped with Bunsen burners, and vintage versions of the periodic table. This summer, a number of these venerable lecture halls were completely refurbished and modernized. The old wooden lecture hall seats, dark with age from seventy years of hard use by Brooklyn College students, have been removed and replaced with far more comfortable seats. And installed in each lecture hall is a suite of audiovisual equipment that allows instructors to project computer screen images, DVDs, and other media, giving students in the sciences access to the full range of educational materials now available in their subjects.

While crews were restoring the geology lecture hall on the third floor, faculty rediscovered a rare set of dinosaur footprints from the Glen Rose Trackway in Texas, perhaps the world’s most famous dinosaur track discovery. The rock, painted brown and attached to the wall, was hidden behind a projection screen. The specimen was identified when the signature of College dinosaur hunter Roland Bird was found on the wall behind the rock. The tracks, which Bird gave the College in 1942, will be restored by geology students in the coming year.

Roosevelt Hall, long home to the Department of Physical Education and Exercise Science, will be transformed into a science building when the West Quad Building opens with new gyms, a dance studio, pool, and other facilities. The renovation of Roosevelt Hall is part of an academic initiative to renew the natural sciences at Brooklyn College.

Conference Center in the Student Center

Brooklyn College attracts distinguished scholars, artists, and public figures, who lecture, attend conferences, and meet with our students. The Woody Tanger Auditorium in the Brooklyn College Library is a modern space equipped to record and broadcast these events. The College also needs a larger facility with the sophisticated technology that today’s presentations require.

The top two floors of the Student Center will be redesigned to accommodate a Conference Center. Video projectors, computer and audiovisual interfaces, projector screens, and an audio system will also serve academic conferences and meetings and make the College an attractive setting for large gatherings of community organizations.
“A Fierce Determination,”
Library Archival Exhibit

Brooklyn College graduates sometimes don’t realize that during their years at Brooklyn College they were making history. Since 1950, the Special Collections Division of the Brooklyn College Library has been collecting student materials, including newspapers, yearbooks, course bulletins, fraternity and sorority memorabilia, and student handbills. George Edelman, ’42, for example, has donated an extensive collection of College sports memorabilia: football jerseys, pennants, and programs that document the glory days of the Kingsman gridders.

For our seventy-fifth anniversary, College Archivist Anthony Cucchiara and his staff mounted a glorious exhibit of some of these items. From the silver shovel that Mayor La Guardia used to break ground on the Midwood campus to the costume worn by Jimmy Smits, ’80, when he played Othello in a College production, the exhibit gleaned the most representative treasures from the College’s collection; it showed relics from Country Fair and the house plans, and mementos from such favorite teachers as “Skipper” Jo Davidson and Dean Adele Bildersee. Alumni who have seen the exhibit have come away touched, amused, and full of nostalgia.

If you have material from your years at Brooklyn College that you wish to share, please call the Archives and Special Collections Division of the Brooklyn College Library at (718) 951-5346 to arrange a donation.

Boylan, La Guardia, Ingersoll, Roosevelt: these are the big names on campus today.

In the current building boom at Brooklyn College, renovations, upgrades, and new structures are everywhere in evidence. In years to come, these new, still unnamed buildings will make the same impact on our students as those named Boylan, La Guardia, Ingersoll, and Roosevelt.

These improvements create an opportunity for our friends. We can think of no more effective way to leave a legacy than to have an integral part of Brooklyn College named after you or someone you wish to honor and remember.

Please call the Brooklyn College Foundation for more information about perpetuating a name and helping Brooklyn College perpetuate its tradition of academic excellence.
New Trustees

Marjorie Magner, ’69, Chairman

Marjorie Magner is one of the financial services industry’s most accomplished women. While serving as chairman and CEO of Citigroup’s Global Consumer Group, Magner was frequently recognized as one of Wall Street’s most successful leaders. Her honors included Fortune’s Most Powerful Women in American Business, The Wall Street Journal’s list of 50 Women to Watch and U.S. Banker magazine’s Most Powerful Women in Banking. After graduating from Brooklyn College with a degree in psychology, Magner attended the Krannert School of Management at Purdue University, where she earned an MSIA. Early in her career, she worked for Chemical Bank and after 1987 for Citigroup and its predecessor companies in positions of increasing responsibility. Magner is an active supporter of her alma mater. Her philanthropy established the Magner Center for Career Development and Internships as well as CareerMakers, which places students in one-semester internships at Citibank. The Alumni Association named Magner “Alumna of the Year” at its recent Seventy-fifth Anniversary Gala.

Barry Feirstein, ’74

Barry Feirstein received a bachelor’s degree in economics, with a minor in political science. He earned an M.B.A. from Harvard Business School in 1978 and began his career as a technology analyst for what is now the Equitable Capital Corporation, where he rose to become a managing director. In 1993, he founded Feirstein Capital Management, LLC, of which he is president. He has also established Feirstein Partners and Feirstein Offshore Fund, Inc., investment firms that specialize in U.S. securities.

Oheneba Boachie-Adjei, ’76

Oheneba Boachie-Adjei is associate clinical professor of orthopaedic surgery at Weill Medical College of Cornell University and associate attending orthopaedic surgeon at the Hospital for Special Surgery and New York-Presbyterian Hospital, where he is chief of the scoliosis service. Boachie-Adjei graduated from Brooklyn College with a bachelor’s degree summa cum laude in chemistry and earned his medical degree from the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1980. He is founder and chairman of the Foundation of Orthopaedics and Complex Spine, which treats bone disorders in the people of Ghana and Barbados. New York magazine named him one of New York’s top doctors in June 2005.
