

HELP YOUR COMMUNITY

Learn Medical Interpreting

With Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center

Memorial Sloan Kettering
Cancer Center

Bilingual? Want to become a professionally trained medical interpreter? Brooklyn physicians and their patients need your help. Take the Spring 2021 course in:

Medical Interpreting offered FREE to bilingual Brooklyn College students Fridays 1:30 – 5:30 pm from March 5th-May 14th. Apply by February 10th.

To apply, contact:

BCCC-Cure-Education@brooklyn.cuny.edu

Brooklyn College
Cancer Center

Department of Modern Languages and Literatures

Memorial Sloan Kettering
Cancer Center

2021 Medical Interpreting Training

Course Information:

This 40-hour medical interpreting class taught by experienced interpreters from the Immigrant Health and Cancer Disparities Center of Memorial Sloan Kettering is designed to meet the growing interest of many bilingual individuals who want to become professionally trained medical interpreters.

You will learn the Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice of the medical interpreter, medical terminology, cultural sensitivity, and interpreting skills, including simultaneous, consecutive and sight translation. Students who enroll will have access to our Online Language Lab, where they can further practice their interpreting skill on their own and receive feedback from their instructors and peers.

Eligibility criteria:

To qualify students must demonstrate fluency in English and a second language. Students who are not fluent will not be able to participate.