

The Brooklyn College Foundation
Annual Report, 2005–2006

Dear Friends of Brooklyn College

The 2005–2006 Brooklyn College Foundation Annual Report appears just as Brooklyn College completes one five-year strategic plan and embarks on a new one. We have therefore taken the opportunity to look back on the last five years and reflect on the progress the College has made toward its goals and to glance ahead as our work continues, governed still by the same ideals.

Brooklyn College serves three important constituencies: its students, its faculty, and its borough. It does so by attracting the best graduating high school students of the borough and giving them a sound liberal education and preparation for a career in a helpful and supportive setting; by recruiting highly qualified new members to its faculty and supporting their efforts in the classroom and their professional advancement; and by opening its gates and its campus to the surrounding community and dedicating its resources in inquiry, knowledge, and skills to the interests and advantage of the borough.

Brooklyn College performs these services by maintaining and improving its academic quality, making students the center of its endeavor, and taking its civic responsibilities seriously. This annual report examines how the College has done these things during the last five years and describes the results in concrete detail.

The College's achievements, which are real, result from a concerted effort by our students, faculty, staff, and administration; our elected officials in the borough of Brooklyn, the city of New York, and the state of New York; and the perennially loyal and generous alumni and friends of the College.

I thank you all most sincerely and look forward to our continuing work together.

Dear Alumni and Friends

It is a great pleasure to present the Brooklyn College Foundation Annual Report for 2005–2006 and to report to you about the exciting developments at both the College and the Foundation over the past year.

I am proud to serve as chairman of the Foundation at a time when the College is undergoing a tremendous renaissance, including a major campaign to rebuild and revitalize our beautiful campus and a renewed commitment to academic excellence. All of us at the Foundation are grateful to President Christoph M. Kimmich for his leadership and vision.

The Brooklyn College Foundation supports the College in many ways, not the least of which is to raise and steward private funding.

During the past year we have hired professional fundraising staff, established a new active committee structure for the board, and developed new programs in major gifts and planned giving.

These efforts have already paid off, enabling the Foundation to substantially increase its commitment to scholarships, faculty development, and major capital projects.

We recognize that quality higher education is a critical prerequisite for success: Brooklyn College makes a huge difference in the lives of students today, as it did for my generation and yours. I encourage you to join us in our mission of providing affordable quality higher education to successive generations of BC students.

Your gift ensures that the College will continue to provide scholarships, attract and retain outstanding faculty, and build and maintain a beautiful campus, making us all proud of the College that has meant so much to us.

In 2005, the first five-year strategic plan of President Christoph Kimmich's administration concluded, and a second plan, for the period 2005–2010, was prepared in consultation with the College community and promulgated by the president. This annual report looks back on the College's achievements under President Kimmich's first strategic plan and, briefly, ahead to the aspirations of his second, with respect to three goals of particular interest to the friends and benefactors of Brooklyn College:

centered campus

- 1. Maintaining and improving the academic quality of the College,
- 2. Creating a student-centered campus, and
- 3. Strengthening the College's relations with the borough of Brooklyn.

ugh of Brooklyn

Academic

The academic quality of Brooklyn College results from the College's sound academic programs, from its well-prepared and highly motivated students, and from its growing faculty of ambitious young teacher-scholars.

Academic Programs

The Brooklyn College core curriculum, a general education program of eleven required courses, brought the College to national prominence when it was adopted twenty-five years ago, at the outset of a great back-to-basics movement in American higher education. The core, which became our signature program, owes its long life to a series of adjustments, modifications, and reforms over the years. Recently, in the most extensive rethinking to date, we divided the curriculum into two tiers, one for each half of a four-year undergraduate course of study, and gave greater depth and concentration to its natural science component.

The College's M.F.A. programs are the most prestigious of its graduate offerings, and, among these, the creative writing program is particularly outstanding. An endowment created by a gift of Irwin and Carole Lainoff, both of the Class of 1953, and another generous gift by Himan Brown, '34, enable Michael Cunningham, Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist and coordinator of the fiction program, to sponsor public readings, invite writers-in-residence, award an annual student literary prize, and offer scholarships to a select group of talented candidates. The program has attained national stature and attracts young poets, playwrights, and novelists of unprecedented quality.

Students

As a matter of policy, Brooklyn College recruits the best students graduating from the borough's high schools. To that end, we have raised the academic standards of our entering freshman class every year since fall 2000, recently appointed a new enrollment services officer, and strengthened our recruitment effort. In fall 2006, the average SAT score of regularly admitted first-time freshmen was 1137 and their mean high school academic average was 85.5. Incoming freshmen at Brooklyn College have the highest SAT math scores in the University. Honors College students entering Brooklyn College this fall were the most highly qualified in the University, with an average SAT score of 1412 and a mean high school academic average of 94.8.

Philanthropy and Strategy

Barry Feirstein, '74, head of Feirstein Capital Management, saw that creating an endowment for our Presidential Scholarships, the College's most prestigious and most generous undergraduate award, would free up funds that could then be applied to the College's many other needs. He stirred his fellow Brooklyn College Foundation trustees to action by offering a matching grant of up to $100,000. The fund thus inaugurated has grown to $805,000 and supports eight Presidential Scholarships in perpetuity.

"Endowing scholarships so that the College can dispose more freely of its scarce public funds is one of the great services that members of the Foundation board can perform for their alma mater," says Feirstein. Presidential Scholarships attract top-quality students, and the public funds thus released go to raising standards and improving programs.

Quality

Academic quality is anchored in a commitment to the highest standards in teaching and learning, in the creative arts, in research and scholarship.

—From the 2005–2010 Brooklyn College Strategic Plan

To improve the quality of its programs in the natural sciences and extend opportunities to talented students, Brooklyn College participates actively in a number of national initiatives. Minority Opportunities in Research, for example, a program of the National Institutes of Health, has awarded the College $430,000 in annual support for its Research Initiative for Scientific Enhancement, intended for underrepresented minorities. In 2006, the Brooklyn College science faculty won a coveted $3.2 million Support of Continuous Research Excellence grant that will fund opportunities for students in new biomedical research for the next five years.

Since 2000, there has been a leap in the number and prestige of postgraduate scholarships awarded to graduating seniors. Brooklyn College students have won Fulbright, Beinecke, Mellon, Gates Millennium, National Science Foundation, Salk, Truman, and Rhodes scholarships.

Faculty

After an interval of nearly twenty-five years, Brooklyn College resumed academic hiring in the late 1990s, and young teacher-scholars of exceptional quality appointed since fall 2000 now make up 37 percent of our full-time teaching faculty. They have revitalized our academic departments, improved the quality of our teaching, introduced new programs, and, together with senior faculty, won over $10 million in research grants in 2006. To give new faculty a solid foundation at the College, we have established a full orientation program that focuses on pedagogy and professional development, and, with the help of the Brooklyn College Foundation, we offer our faculty travel funds and remunerated time for research.

All these efforts have brought Brooklyn College to the attention of the Princeton Review, whose 2005 edition of America's Best Value Colleges ranked the College third of seventy-seven colleges and praised its “rigorous” academics, offered at a “ridiculously affordable” tuition fee.

Student-Centered

Brooklyn College prepares its students not only by offering them sound, well-taught academic programs, but also by supporting and enriching their college careers and easing their way at critical passages. We are especially attentive to the needs of entering freshmen and of upperclassmen choosing careers and seeking employment, and to a general embellishment of all our students' lives.

Support

The introduction of entering freshmen to college life is a moment of great consequence to our students' academic success and general well-being. Effective freshman orientation contributes to the quality of our students' course work, their stamina and resilience over the long term, and their preparedness for a second great transition at graduation.

The First College Year, a prize-winning orientation program inaugurated in 1998, intends to create a sense of belonging and of solidarity and an ethos of mutual support among the members of each entering class. During the summer before matriculation, each class of newly admitted freshmen reads one book of particular interest. This common reading—Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close by Jonathan Safran Foer in summer 2006—becomes a subject of discussion during orientation, when the author appears on campus. At orientation, entering students are invited to join cohorts of approximately twenty-five that remain together for freshman core and composition courses and for attentive counseling by our academic advisement office, which has been reorganized to gain our students' trust and to intervene swiftly and effectively when students fall into difficulties. This protracted effort to foster an admitted class raised our first-year retention rate from 75.5% in 2000 to 83.4% two years later.

Brooklyn College students, famously, are career-minded, and as they advance through their course of study, their minds turn toward choosing a career, preparing themselves, and finding work.

The Magner Center for Career Development and Internships, a gift of Marjorie Magner, '69, chairman of the board of the Brooklyn College Foundation, advises students about careers, prepares them for interviews, places them in internships, matches them with alumni mentors, and supports them psychologically as they are about to leave college and take up full-time employment. It is one of the most sought-after and most effective sources of support on campus.

Enrichment

Our students' lives are enriched most notably by the expansive academic and cultural offerings of the Brooklyn College Honors Academy. These offerings were further enlarged and improved in 2003 by our first endowed professorship, a gift to the Honors Academy by Carol Zicklin, '61. The professorship rotates at two-year intervals and attracts particularly accomplished scholars to the faculty.

Our Honors Academy gives students New York City and all its endless resources and possibilities; our stipends and scholarships for travel and study abroad give them the world. Gifts made since 2000 by Roy Furman, '60, and by Leonard and Claire Tow, '50 and '52, respectively, have created a fund of nearly $40,000 from which our students draw stipends that take them to every continent for travel, laboratory and archival research, language instruction, and archaeological digs. They return to the College transformed by the experience, like their benefactors years ago.

New Physical Plant

The pride of the current administration is the physical transformation of the campus by renovation and new construction and its contribution to our students' lives and the life of the entire community.

- The new library, renovated and greatly enlarged in a particularly happy marriage of new architecture and old and furnished through generous gifts from our alumni, opened in 2001.

Campus

Brooklyn College measures its success to no small extent by its ability to attract and retain top quality students and, in due course, launch them confidently into the future. Students stay and graduate if they study in a setting that is welcoming and hospitable and that helps them become part of the College community through interaction with their instructors, their advisers, and their peers.

—From the 2005–2010 Brooklyn College Strategic Plan

An Exemplary Benefactor

Don Buchwald, '59, who majored in speech and theater, runs one of the leading voice and talent agencies in the country and knows about show business. He extends his generosity, sponsorship, and protection not only to celebrities but also to Brooklyn College students, whom he has taught, coached, and engaged as interns. Buchwald has pledged $1.3 million toward the new performing arts center and thus toward the training and the successful careers of generations of Brooklyn College students in theater and music.

"I am proud to support the campaign for a performing arts center at Brooklyn College and, with my gift, to express my gratitude to the College for its immense contribution to my career in the entertainment industry," Buchwald says. "I want future generations of talented and ambitious students to enjoy, as I did, the inspiration, the dedicated teaching, and the vital practical experience that lead to rewarding careers in this exciting field."

Beautiful, habitable, and technologically preeminent, the library is the joy of our student body and a showpiece of the campus.

- The Topfer Library Café and its courtyard, made possible by a gift of Morton, '59, and Angela Topfer, opened in 2000 and met with such demand that it was doubled in capacity five years later, with the help of the New York City Council.
- The West Quad building for athletics and student services was a dream in 2000; in 2006, it is an enormous construction site moving, without substantial delay, toward completion in 2009.
- Roosevelt Hall, which will be vacated when athletics moves to the West Quad building, is to become a desperately needed, long-overdue new science facility, for which preliminary financing has been procured and concrete planning has begun.
- A performing arts center, with theater, chamber music, and gallery space, will rise between Whitman and Gershwin halls. The capital campaign for a combination of public and private funding, led by a challenge grant of $10 million by Leonard, '50, and Claire, '52, Tow and joined by many members of the Brooklyn College Foundation Board, is well advanced, and architects are about to be retained.

Brooklyn's

Since 2000, as a matter of explicit policy, Brooklyn College has undertaken to enlarge and improve its presence in the borough. In a new initiative, the College makes its campus welcoming and its facilities available to the surrounding community at little or no cost. It vigorously extends the services and resources of its School of Education to schools throughout the borough, opens its highly respected Speech and Hearing Center to the public, explores the history and current affairs of the borough at an institute dedicated to that purpose, and contributes to Brooklyn's economic development.

The School of Education, in cooperation with New Visions for Public Schools, a project of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, and greatly assisted by Brooklyn College Foundation trustee George Friedman, '56, has worked to strengthen Wingate, Bushwick, Erasmus Hall, Thomas Jefferson, and Prospect Heights high schools. At Erasmus, for example, the College sponsors a Science, Technology and Research High School that prepares students interested in science and technology for college.

The Speech and Hearing Center of the College's Department of Speech Communication Arts and Sciences, one of the oldest and most respected clinics in the country, conducts important new research, trains speech pathologists, and provides clinical services for the general public. Thousands of children and adults with developmental and acquired disorders of articulation, phonology, language, and voice come to the center for diagnostic evaluation and therapy.

The Center for the Study of Brooklyn, founded in 2005, is the only public policy research center devoted exclusively to the borough. The center has sponsored a conference on housing displacement in Brooklyn, the dark side of the borough's economic revival. It is exploring the economic future of Nostrand Avenue at the Junction and studying Coney Island Avenue near the College, where Orthodox Jews and Sunni Muslims live together peacefully and run prosperous small businesses in a reviving, thriving neighborhood.

The College's interest in the economic revival of Brooklyn expresses itself concretely in the Flatbush-Nostrand Business Improvement District, established by the College and others in May 2006. The Junction BID comes as a new Target store is being constructed at the corner of Nostrand and Avenue I and as negotiations begin for a Barnes & Noble bookstore nearby—just as the borough's economic revival reaches central Brooklyn and our doorstep.

College

Brooklyn College is respected beyond its walls as an educational and cultural resource, a source of continuing education programs on and off campus, a partner in community development, and an exemplar of service and volunteer activities.

—From the 2005–2010 Brooklyn College Strategic Plan

The Cost of Keeping Current

Diana Rogovin Davidow, '66; M.A., '73, earned her undergraduate degree in speech and her graduate degree in education with specialization in speech and hearing of the handicapped. She then returned to the College's diagnostic speech labs as adjunct lecturer and clinician. She remained interested and engaged in our Speech and Hearing Center after she moved to Los Angeles, where she continued to practice as a speech pathologist. In response to an appeal by Professor Gail Gurland, deputy chairperson of the Department of Speech Communication Arts and Sciences, Diana Davidow made a major gift that has enabled the center to build a state-of-the-art "smart classroom" and a research laboratory for faculty and students, and to purchase all the necessary materials and equipment.

"The gift I was given at Brooklyn College set me on a course for life," Davidow says. "The Brooklyn College Speech and Hearing Center is second to none, a position it can maintain only if it can anticipate and acquire the physical resources necessary to serve the center's educators and clients. Therefore, instead of targeting my gift to a new program that might be more visible, I have chosen to contribute to the purchase of resources for an established program that continues to change the lives of students and clients alike."

In Retrospect and Prospect

Brooklyn College has renewed and revived itself hand-in-hand with the borough of Brooklyn. It is our ambition to be and remain the preeminent institution of our class: a well-run, productive, and expanding public urban college that gives its upwardly mobile students a sound undergraduate education and preparation for a career, fosters the professional development of an ever stronger faculty, and contributes importantly to the life of the surrounding community and the borough at large. Realizing this ambition depends not only on efforts within our walls but also, and importantly, on the loyalty, generosity, and support of alumni and friends of the College. Their contribution is large, obvious, and indispensable in everything we do.

Thank You!

The Trustees of the Brooklyn College Foundation gratefully acknowledge the donors whose gifts received between July 1, 2005, and June 30, 2006, helped the College achieve its mission. Their generosity has contributed to new construction, a growing endowment, additional scholarships for deserving students, and continuing recruitment of an ever stronger faculty.

We are especially gratified that our alumni and friends give in growing numbers. Your gifts perpetuate a tradition of high-quality, affordable education for well-prepared, ambitious, dedicated students.

Legacy Society

The Legacy Society is a select group of alumni and friends who have named the Brooklyn College Foundation in their wills, trusts, life income gifts, insurance policies, or retirement plans. It is our pleasure to acknowledge their extraordinary commitment to securing the future of the College.

"I have never lost sight of the fact that my profession and my satisfying retirement were due, in large part, to the excellent education I received at Brooklyn College. In gratitude, I hope that this gift will help others achieve their goals."

Gifts that Support Brooklyn College

Brooklyn College relies on the generosity of individuals, foundations, and corporations to support our mission of providing a high-quality, affordable education for deserving students. There are many ways that donors can help us achieve our mission.

The Annual Fund

Annual gifts by alumni and friends to the Brooklyn College Foundation underwrite current needs that cannot be funded by state assistance, tuition, or fees. Unrestricted gifts to the Annual Fund support scholarships, facilities, cocurricular student-learning opportunities, equipment for classrooms and laboratories, special seminars, and faculty development initiatives. As public funding dwindles, the College must rely more and more on private contributions.

For more information about the Annual Fund please contact Phillip Ammonds, Associate Director of the Annual Fund, at (718) 951-5074, or PAmmonds@brooklyn.cuny.edu.

The Legacy Society: Planned Gifts and Bequests

Members of the Brooklyn College Legacy Society have made a provision for the College in their estate planning. The Brooklyn College Foundation offers several future-oriented investment opportunities for those who want to carry forward the spirit of excellence at Brooklyn College, including life income trust, charitable lead trust, life insurance, and gifts of stock or real estate. Legacy Society members may also make a planned gift in the form of a bequest.

For more information about the Legacy Society or making a planned gift, please contact William Healy, Senior Philanthropic Adviser, at (718) 951-5074, or WHealy@brooklyn.cuny.edu.

Gifts Online

You may now make a tax-deductible gift to Brooklyn College by logging on to the Brooklyn College Foundation Web site, www.brooklyncollegefoundation.org, and using our secure connection. We accept credit or debit cards with a MasterCard or Visa logo.

Establishing a Scholarship, Award, or Prize

The Brooklyn College Foundation offers more than six hundred scholarships and awards—valued at nearly $2 million annually—that help our best and most ambitious students meet the expenses of their education. Within limits, a scholarship, award, or prize may reflect the specific wishes of a donor. Many funds have been established to honor a former student or faculty member or to encourage students in a particular academic area. Establishing a scholarship, award, or prize can also perpetuate the memory of a loved one.

For more information about establishing a scholarship, award, or prize, please contact Michelle Arrington, Deputy Director of Development, at (718) 951-5074, or Arrington@brooklyn.cuny.edu.

Tributes and Memorials

The Tribute and Memorial Program of the Brooklyn College Foundation was created at your request. This fund receives gifts made in tribute to a friend, business associate, or loved one on the occasion of a birthday, anniversary, or retirement. It also receives memorial gifts.

For more information about tributes and memorials, please contact Phillip Ammonds, Associate Director of the Annual Fund, at (718) 951-5074, or PAmmonds@brooklyn.cuny.edu.

Matching Gifts: Double the Impact of Your Donation

Every year, more than seven thousand corporations provide matching funds to educational and cultural organizations across the country. If you are affiliated with such a company, you may be eligible to have your gift to the Brooklyn College Foundation matched. Your company's human resources department or personnel office is the most likely source of specific information. Complete the matching-gift form provided by your employer and send it with your gift. The Foundation will process the company form and notify you when the match is received.
